New Jerseys most active commercial real estate developers and investors are making plans to attend The Fifth Annual New Jersey Gold Coast & Spring Multifamily Summit, the high-level market intelligence and networking event that has been attended by more than 1,500 executives over the last four years. More than 30 speakers will participate in 10 panel discussions in this full-day conference on March 29, 2017 combining seven hours of informational panels and networking, including: breakfast, lunch and many other new business development opportunities.

The summit will bring special focus to the emergence of New Jerseys Gold Coast on the global investment stage, including: Analysis of the infusion of new capital sources: international, crowdfunding, and North-American regional players. How has the Gold Coast gained acceptance outside of New Jersey as an investment/development destination comparable to Manhattan, boroughs and other international regions? From an investor perspective, what is the most significant perception change about the Gold Coast in the last 1-2 years? Whats next for Jersey City? Where are investors/developers finding the next opportunity? Is there any shortage of opportunity in 2017? Are there too many investors/developers attempting to break into the vibrant Gold Coast market? Will new investors and developers emerge, and will there be enough room for them?
