

Internet Disputes

Over the past decade, as businesses and their customers have increasingly moved online, our clients have experienced a growing need for Internet-related legal services. Both companies and individuals hope that when someone searches for their name using a search engine (such as Google), the search results do not display negative content that gives rise to legal issues. However, in some cases, the search results contain or link to instances of defamation, trademark infringement, copyright infringement or other violations of the law. Our attorneys are experienced in protecting our clients' online reputations and combating violations of our clients' intellectual property rights.

Attorneys

Kenneth S. Goodkind

Jordan A. LaVine