Prospective businesses should be aware that although the laws in New Jersey regarding recreational use and the sale of marijuana are expected to loosen, federal law continues to prohibit the distribution, production, and possession of the drug. Inconsistencies between state and federal laws remain, and the disparity between the two seems to be growing. You should make sure that you're seeking the advice of an attorney so that your business complies with the most up-to-date regulations afforded to you by the state.
