

Flaster Greenberg Welcomes Communications Manager

Press Release

October 25, 2011

Cherry Hill, NJ

Flaster Greenberg PC's Director of Marketing, Nancy Gimbol, recently announced the arrival of the firm's new Communications Manager, Molly O'Leary. In this capacity, Molly will be instrumental in moving Flaster Greenberg's communications initiatives forward, especially in the areas of social media strategy, media counseling and relations and editorial support.

Molly joins Flaster Greenberg from Maven Communications, a Philadelphia-based public relations and communications agency, where she was responsible for all aspects of her clients' media relations. Previously, she served as special assistant to the secretary of the commonwealth at the Pennsylvania Department of State, where she was instrumental in leading and managing key initiatives for the Secretary and Executive Office. A seasoned communicator, Molly worked closely with State's communications office to develop compelling speeches, press materials, presentations and text of the Secretary's testimonies before the Pennsylvania Legislature and U.S. Congress.

"I'm pleased that Molly has joined our dynamic Marketing Department to assist us in developing and implementing initiatives aligned with Flaster Greenberg's strategic vision," stated Nancy.

Molly earned a B.A. in Marketing and also holds a certificate in Human Resource Management from Temple University.